Three More Japanese Warships Sunk By Yank Bombs In Solomons

KURILE ISLAND BASE BLASTED BY AMERICANS

NAVY PREPARES FOR 6 YEARS OF WAR AGAINST JAPS

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, July 20 (AP)—The Navy publicly projected six more years of war against Japan today, and within the hour announced that great Liberator bombers striking far beyond their Aleutians base on the short route to Tokyo had damaged heavily the strategic enemy outpost of Paramushiro.

This bastion is on the northernmost of the Kurile Islands which stretch south 700 miles like a dagger pointing to the Japanese mainland. To raid Paramushiro, American planes of the North Pacific command made their first announced attack mission over the enemy side of the Pacific.

Heavy Losses Expected

Issuance of the battle report so soon after a press conference set up by Secretary Knox to knock down false optimism in this country suggested that if there are to be six more years of Pacific fighting, as Vice Admiral Frederick J. Horne intimated to the conference, they will be spent largely in Japan's own waters.

Horne, stressing this prospect, said that from here on the American navy would be working all over the ocean while Japan would be fighting on steadily shrinking interior lines. Moreover the admiral, who is vice chief of naval operations, said the United States must build inland bases from the ground up as it advances, and it must be prepared for the heavy fleet losses always expected in offensive operations.

Horne was one of four persons who discussed the war situation and its relation to munitions production at Secretary Knox's press conference. The others were Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of War Production Board; James V. Forrestal, undersecretary of the navy; and Knox.

Too Much Optimism

Knox himself declared that we are "already feeling the effects" of overoptimism about the war's end. He said that these effects are apparent in a drop in production.

Wilson reported that the aircraft industry should produce 8,500 planes in July because it had the facilities, materials and manpower to reach that scheduled peak. However, he said, there is every prospect that it will fail to achieve the goal. Knox blamed this on complacency which he said robbed workers of their "will to produce."

Forrestal said that in line with plans for a long and costly war in the Pacific the navy has laid out on paper and started in production a fleet with a tonnage about seven times that the huge naval force already afloat.

Admiral Horne said that the fleet expansion program had been laid down for completion in 1947 but that the navy had projected its plans two years beyond that time to provide for replacements and repairs.

The communique telling of the attack on Paramushiro gave few details. It said that a number of fires were observed and that Japanese ships in nearby Paramushiro straits suffered a number of near hits.

Aid Cut Off For Doomed Munda Base

BY C. YATES M'DANIEL

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Wednesday, July 21 (AP)—Three more Japanese warships sank to a coral-fringed graveyard in waters around New Georgia in the Solomons early yesterday morning—victims of American bombs—as air, land and sea forces maintained overwhelming pressure to seal the doom of the beleaguered enemy at Munda.

American Liberators, Mitchells and Avenger bombers thus beat off the latest attempt by the Japanese navy to fight assistance through their hard-pressed comrades on Munda, and General Douglas MacArthur said in today's communique:

"The tightening investment of Munda has now rendered supply or reinforcement of the enemy dangerous and difficult. A slow but constant deterioration of his beleaguered garrison can be expected unless our blockaded ring can be broken."

UNION OF UMW WITH AFL NEAR

John L. Lewis Confers With High Officials Of Federation

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Reaffiliation of the United Mine Workers of America with the American Federation of Labor appeared a step nearer today following a three-hour conference between John L. Lewis and executives of the AFL.

Lewis and his United Mine Workers left the AFL more than five years ago, when the mine union leader started the CIO. His recently-filed application for reaffiliation is to be acted on by the AFL executive council when it meets next month in Chicago.

Daniel J. Tobin, AFL vice-president who heads a three-man committee studying the Lewis application, told reporters the outlook for reaffiliation "looks somewhat better" after today's meeting.

Asked what he thought about the outlook, Lewis handed reporters a brief statement asserting that "in the interest of unifying the policies of organized labor" the UMW "has proposed reaffiliation" and "in doing so it accepts the American Federation of Labor as it now exists, and expects the American Federation of Labor to accept the United Mine Workers of America as it now exists."

War Plant Dispute In Muskegon Brings Out State Police

Muskegon, July 20 (AP)—A detachment of State Police, summoned as a precaution in a war plant dispute between white and negro employes, continued to stand by near here tonight, although a strike which resulted from the dispute was ended.

Forty state troopers were ordered to the Grand Haven post, 11 miles away, when white and negro workers at the Muskegon Heights foundry of Campbell, Wyant, and Cannon Co., quit their jobs in an argument, a company spokesman said, over the presence of a white steward.

Captain Archie Downing, in charge of the police detachment, said following settlement of the strike that the troopers would remain at Grand Haven "until we are sure there is going to be no trouble."

New York, July 20 (AP)—The sale of film rights of Wendell L. Willkie's book, "One World," to 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., was announced today by Simon and Schuster Inc., publishers of the book.

The amount paid by the movie company was not disclosed. The book describes Willkie's round-the-world flight to allied and neutral nations.

Willkie is chairman of the board of directors of the film corporation.

Hitler And Mussolini Talk Over Prospects

BY GORDON TAIT

London, July 20 (AP)—Adolf Hitler flew into Italy Monday for a conference with Premier Mussolini, the axis announced tonight, indicating the Nazis are gravely concerned over the fate of their junior partner, trembling under allied attack.

London sources said the conference, held at an unnamed town in northern Italy, apparently was a last-minute attempt to whip up the flagging spirits of Italy, whose empire has been lost, her European soil invaded and her capital bombed.

Choice of yesterday at the meeting day was a curious one for Mussolini. While the dictators were discussing "military questions," Rome was being pounded by more than 500 bombers in the biggest raid to come Il Duce's way.

The meeting—first since the dictators conferred at Salzburg April 7-10 while the position of Tunisia was becoming serious—was not unexpected in view of recent allied successes.

The fact that Hitler went into Italy was interpreted in some quarters here as an indication that Mussolini is holding the whip hand at the moment—and the only whip Mussolini could hold over Hitler would be a threat to make a separate peace.

"If Mussolini wanted to beg for German tanks, guns and airplanes, one would have thought he would have to run to the fuehrer's headquarters for them," one observer said. He pointed out that of their five meetings since Italy entered the war, two were held at Salzburg, in German territory, one at the Russian front and two at Brenner Pass on the German-Italian frontier.

British observers said they believed the announcements of similar German and Italian communiques that "military questions" were discussed, but then doubted whether Germany was in a position to send much help to Italy.

PUBLICITY BAN PLACED ON AAA

Farm Program Employes Can Issue No More Press Handouts

Washington, July 20 (AP)—The Agricultural Adjustment Agency (AAA) has forbidden its 200,000 field employes and state, county and local farmer committeemen to distribute information about AAA farm programs to the press, radio and other mass means of communication.

The agriculture department disclosed this today in making public an interpretation by its solicitor of a provision of the new department appropriation act prohibiting the use of Federal funds in paying salaries and expenses of any AAA regional, state or county information employee.

The field employees and committeemen also were told that they must not carry on any promotional activity for the AAA as an institution or for the AAA policy of crop control, or to build public pressure for or against congressional action on farm measures.

The distribution of AAA information, the department instructed, must be left to the state and county agricultural extension services. In the past, the AAA and extension services often have been at odds. On the other hand, the extension services and the American Farm Bureau Federation have been closely connected—in some cases both contributing to salaries of county farm agents.

Nazis Execute 50 French In Killing Of German Officer

At The German Frontier, July 20. (AP) — Fifty French citizens were executed in Paris last week in retaliation for the shooting of a German lieutenant, trustworthy information reaching this Swiss area from the former French capital revealed today.

One of the 50 escaped while marching to the shooting-ground. He immediately was replaced by a man picked from the crowd of spectators, it was reported.

Hostage executions were said to have been carried out at regular intervals in an effort to offset sabotage, but since the axis occupation of the entire country they rarely are announced.

DOOLITTLE'S LOSSES IN BIG RAID ONLY FIVE BOMBERS

BY RELMAN MORIN

Allied Headquarters In North Africa, July 20. (AP)—Reconnaissance photographs today showed vast sections of Rome's great railway yards in twisted, smoking ruins from the terrific blasting dealt yesterday by hundreds of American bombers and the initial raid on the Italian capital was officially labeled an "outstanding successful operation."

While more than 500 heavy and medium bombers struck the city in wave upon wave beneath a bright, midday sun, allied communiques disclosed today that the entire two-and-a-half hour assault was carried out with the loss of five planes.

All of the losses were suffered by Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's strategic air force, for 9th U. S. air force headquarters in Cairo announced that every one of the

QUIZ IN DETROIT RIOTS ORDERED

Wayne Prosecutor Asked To Call Grand Jury Investigation

Detroit, July 20 (AP) — Mayor Edward J. Jeffries' inter-racial board has decided to ask a Grand jury investigation into the causes and circumstances of the race riots here last month which claimed 34 lives.

William J. Norton, chairman of the 12-man board, said tonight the members had adopted unanimously a resolution asking Wayne county (Detroit) Prosecutor William E. Dowling for a one-man Grand jury investigation of unsolved crimes growing out of the rioting.

The resolution also asked that the Grand jury apprehended participants in the riots, probe rumors, find instigators and study any other available material.

A three-man subcommittee was chosen to present the matter to Dowling, Norton said.

If appointed, the Grand jury also would be charged with attempting to fix responsibility for the deaths of 13 of the riot victims. These 13, including six white victims, are listed by the police as unsolved deaths.

Ban On Household Articles Removed

Washington, July 20 (AP)—The War Production Board today authorized a resumption or increase in the manufacture of a number of household articles, including carpet sweepers, pot scourers and food grinders.

The agency emphasized, however, that although greater production is now permitted, it is not guaranteed because of the limited amounts of steel and iron available.

A WPB spokesman said that about 300,000 tons of steel, which cannot be used for military or essential civilian manufacture, could be released from frozen inventories for the purpose.

In addition to the sweepers, grinders and pot scourers, the WLB authorized production of baking and roasting pans, flour seives, jar wrenches, vacuum bottles and lunch boxes and dinner pails.

Jackson, Mich., July 20 (AP) — James Wright and Ralph Weiss, prison inmates who escaped July 11 and kidnaped Ruth Kurtz, Jackson nurse, in her automobile after binding her escort, today were given additional sentences after both pleaded guilty to kidnaping and escape charges.

Each was sentenced to five to 15 years for kidnaping and 18 months to four and a half years for escaping. Wright previously was serving a sentence of one to five years and Weiss six to 15 years.

Soviet Offensive Breaks Out Over 450-Mile Front

London, July 20 (AP) — The great Russian summer offensive broke out over a 450-mile front Tuesday, extending from the Orel sector, where that vital Axis-held "hinge" city was threatened with encirclement, to the Mius river, where Red army troops breached German defenses in front of Taganrog, it was announced in a special Soviet communique tonight.

The Russians said their troops had broken across the Mius river and also the northern Donets river south of Izyum and southwest of Voroshilovgrad, in an area about 300 miles south of Orel, apparently aiming at the heart of the Donets basin. Here strong German forces had thrust back deep into the rich industrial territory last spring to recapture Slavyansk and other steel and rail centers as part of that offensive that reclaimed Kharkov.

Fifty Towns Regained

At least 50 more towns were recaptured by the Soviet forces driving on Orel, including Mtsensk, 31 miles northeast of Orel on a railroad to Moscow, and Bolkhov, 32 miles north of Orel, the Soviet special war bulletin declared. It was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by the Soviet Radio Montior here.

The Soviet midnight communique, broadcast by the Moscow radio several hours after the special war bulletin detailed the new successes, said the offensive about Orel was continuing without letup despite spirited German resistance which was costing the enemy heavily.

Another Moscow broadcast disclosed that in a prelude to Tuesday's smashing land offensive, large forces of Russian heavy bombers smashed at German concentrations and airdromes southeast of Orel late Monday night, destroying a "considerable number" of Nazi air force planes caught on the ground.

Moscow's midnight communique listed more than 4,700 of the enemy killed in engagements about Orel and Belgorod, with another 1,000 declared to have

RETAIL CEILING IS SET ON FISH

New Limitations Go Into Effect Thursday; Strike Reduces Supply

Washington, July 20 (AP)—Maximum retail prices on fresh fish were prescribed today by the office of price administration (OPA) in an action interpreted by some officials as an effort to end the "strike" of many fishermen.

At the office of the co-ordinator of fisheries, officials estimated the work-stoppage of fishermen in the Boston and New Bedford, Mass., areas is costing the country 5,000,000 pounds of fish a week. These and other fishermen have been staying shore in protest against maximum prices recently imposed on wholesale transactions in fresh fish.

Officials explained that part of the fishermen's complaint was that no price ceilings had been placed on fish at retail, permitting dealers to make extra profits by purchasing at government-dictated prices and selling at uncontrolled prices.

OPA ordered retail sellers to limit their prices by a formula based on the number of cents mark-up customarily placed on fish by each retailer between July 5 and July 10. OPA explained that since the previous order regulated the wholesale price, the mark-up formula will automatically force a reduction in retail prices, probably ranging from 10 to 20 per cent.

Later, OPA added, it plans to issue flat "cents per pound" maximum prices on fresh fish.

MONTGOMERY READY FOR KNOCKOUT AT CATANIA

BY DANIEL DeLUCE

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 20. (AP) — With some Italian troops reported in mutinies against German officers and surrendering in great batches, the American forces are spearing deeper inland in a mighty drive to chop Sicily in two and are fanning swiftly along the southern coast, allied headquarters announced today.

In the east near strategic Catania, British troops shattered German tank attacks with bloody losses and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery was gathering strength for a blow to topple that seaport and perhaps carry the offensive fully sustained to Messina to seal off Sicily from the mainland.

Looks Bad For Axis

The situation clearly was critical for the axis.

"There are many indications of mutinies among Italian troops commanded by German officers," today's war bulletin declared.

German officers have been threatened or killed by Italians seeking to surrender, official reports said, and the cleavage between the hitherly-resisting Nazis and war-weary Fascists has become an inter-axis struggle.

Germany's manpower shortage induced the axis high command to make what now appears to have been the mistake of using Italian troops under German officers and non-coms without sufficient German privates in the same units to dominate their morale, observers said.

Lifelines Menaced

This was the over-all picture of invasion:

Western (American) sector: U. S. seventh army troops have dashed 10 miles west along the coast from Agrigento, front dispatches said.

Other units already about 30 miles inland bore a more dangerous threat, aiming at Sicily's central lifelines. From captured Caltanissetta, U. S. troops with Canadian forces are throwing a pincers upon Enna, key of the island's inner defense astride main highways and railroads east and west. The Americans also may be thrusting northwest, toward Palermo only 60 airline miles distant on the northwest coast.

"United States troops continue to push forward in the central and western sectors," headquarters said, taking prisoners by the hun-

STATE TROOPS TO BE REVIVED

Jeeps, Machine Guns And Ammunition Promised For Home Army

Lansing, July 20. (AP)—The state administrative board, urged on by Governor Kelly, moved today to increase the strength and mobility of the Michigan state troops, at the same time relying on President Roosevelt to keep in effect his proclamation ordering the regular army to maintain order in Detroit, scene of a recent serious race riot.

The board allotted $235,573 to buy jeeps, machine guns, bayonets, riot clubs, ammunition, tear gas and additional convoy trucks and ambulances for the state troops, and authorized the addition of 93 officers and men to a permanent force of 350 troopers assigned to Detroit to form a nucleus for rapid mobilization of the military.

It was estimated that the cost of maintaining the permanent force in Detroit, most of them guarding bridges and tunnels across the Detroit river, will cost $428,500 until December.

Kelly quickkly chilled hints that the state should retire from the field and depend on federal troops to control serious civil unrest.

"The federal government," he said, "is not going to help us if it is not assured we are trying to do our best. We cannot just throw up our hands. We must bring the state troops up to their maximum efficiency."

dreds and meeting "almost total lack of resistance."

Central (Canadian) sector: Driving north of Piazza Armerina upon Enna, Canadian troops struck strong opposition from the German 15th armored division, but "continue to fight their way forward."

Eastern (British) sector: Outside the very gates of Catania, waves of desperate German tank attacks were blasted on the rolling plains with heavy losses to the Nazi units, including the Goering Grenadier regiment, parachute troops and infantry.

Messina Next Stop

The famous British eighth army is "gathering strength and armored patrols are probing the defenses," said headquarters, and observers here said Montgomery apparently was getting a firm grip on Catania plain as a springboard for a gigantic jump against Messina.

The communique's wording indicated that the methodical, thorough Montgomery was readying a typical crusher assault by tanks, artillery and infantry. His objective would be not only the battered seaport of Catania only three miles ahead of him, but a pell-mell rush 50 miles up the coast to Messina, some military quarters said.

The Germans were fighting as though with the realization that on this battle depended the fate of Sicily. Catania is the last great natural stronghold below Messina.

(Berlin reported fierce battles outside Catania in which great numbers of British parachutists were said to have been wiped out.)

Allied headquarters said the axis forces "continued their desperate efforts to save Catania where their positions to the south of the town are protected by rivers flowing from the west across Catania plain."

Prisoners Total 35,000

Prison pens swelled with more than 35,000 axis captives to date, and a fourth Italian divisional commander has fallen into allied hands. He is General Giulio Ceasar Gotti Porcinari, leader of the 54th Napoli division. A failure in North Africa, he was sent to Sicily.

Not a single development in the first 10 days of the Sicilian campaign could be seized upon by the Italians to buoy up their morale, and they became prisoners willingly. The reports of mutinies were the clearest sign foreshadowing collapse.

It was reported that at least half of the prisoners so far taken were natives of Sicily, a fact possibly explaining the wholesale surrenders.

The Germans still were fighting with most determined resistance, similar to their dogged stand in April in Tunisit before the allied offensive of overwhelming power battered through and suddenly collapsed the German will to fight.

Whether the same performance would be repeated in Sicily remained to be determined.

Liberator bombers participating in the raid returned safely to bases in the middle east.

"Completely Destroyed"

The 9th air force formations alone dumped nearly 330 tons of high explosives on Rome, the Cairo communique said, declaring that the Littoria railway yards were "completely destroyed."

"String after string of bombs criss-crossed the yards and photographs indicated that an area 400 yards by two miles long is a mass of twisted steel rails, gaping bomb craters and wreckage of rolling stock and buildings," said the war bulletin from the middle east.

"An ammunition train moving through the yards received several direct hits and exploded, contributing to the destruction."

An allied headquarters communique, which described the attack as an "outstanding successful operation," said "very severe damage" was caused to all the targets, including the Littoria and San Lorenzo rail yards, both within the limits of the ancient city, and nearby airdromes and industrial plants.

Airmen Praised Lavishly

Allied aerial chieftains, apparently pleased that the outcome of the attack surpassed expectations, were lavish in their praise of the airmen responsible for its execution.

Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the northwest African air forces, sent congratulations to Doolittle for the success of the raid, saying:

"It is one of the many accurate attacks which your forces have carried on during the present battle, all of which had a marked significance in their successful outcome."

AID CUT OFF FOR DOOMED MUNDA BASE

gauntlet into Munda brought the official toll of enemy military shipping losses in Colomons waters to:

Sunk—Three cruisers, 13 destroyers, one submarine chaser, five cargo vessels and one tanker.

Probably sunk—Five destroyers.

Damaged—Five destroyers and five cargo vessels.

Catalina flying boats picked up the Japanese force of three light cruisers, six destroyers and two transports in the gulf between Vella Lavella and Kolombangara islands shortly after midnight yesterday, and shadowed the enemy convoy until strong formations of Avengers, Mitchells and Liberators arrived on the scene.

Apparently realizing that the darkness failed to conceal their movements, two transports with the protection of three destroyers headed for Vila, Japanese base across Kula gulf from the main island of New Georgia, while the cruisers and remaining destroyers steamed farther offshore to give a flanking cover.

Surviving Vessels Flee

Details of the American air attack were lacking, but the communique declared that surviving ships of the convoy withdrew without reaching its objectives after losing three warships and probably a fourth.

Two Avengers and two Mitchells failed to return from the smashing attack.

A strong formation of Dauntless dive-bombers, in close support of ground troops closing the trap on Munda, again battered Japanese gun positions along a defense perimeter about two miles east of the big air base.

Ranging farther from the battle area, but in direct support of the Munda drive, Liberator bombers dropped 42 tons of bombs on the enemy in the Buin-Faisi area.

A spokesman at allied headquarters disclosed, meantime, that the Japanese had launched nine counter-attacks since the allies captured Mubo, South of Salamaua on New Guinea, July 16, and all had been repulsed.

Advancing Australians and Americans in that sector, he said, found 300 fresh graves which were believed to contain the bodies of Japanese killed during the concentrated air assault which preceded occupation of Mubo.

AMPUTATED OWI ELIMINATES 10 'HEADACHE BOYS'

Washington, July 20 (AP) — Office of War Information, (OWI) which had its financial tail amputated right behind the ears by an irate congress, is making a comeback.

D. C. Speaker, the unofficial capital authority, said today that "good behavior" and competent performance under E. Palmer (EP) Hoyt, the Oregon publisher named as director of OWI's domestic division, had impressed potent congressmen, and will lead to efforts to restore part of the funds taken away from the division when the national legislature reconvenes.

"When congress sawed $6,050,000 from the $8,800,000 asked to run the OWI domestic bureau, director Elmer Davis said it meant curtains for that outfit," Speaker recalled, "actually, they're finding out it was at least a partial blessing in disguise."

Speaker said that the operating fund slash meant closure of 46 OWI field offices and elimination of the motion picture branch.

Boss Gets Break

Pursuing his thesis, Speaker said the forced closure of the field offices was really a break for Hoyt, who was named to his post just before congress whacked the agency's funds. Congress thus spared Hoyt the onerous job of housecleaning, without exposing him to the dirks of fired employees or their political sponsors.

"There were about ten 'headache boys' among the 46 field directors," Speaker explained. "They were long on missionary zeal, and short on practical newspaper savvy. They made publishers sore in their states, and riled up their congressional delegations."

"They were cozy under civil service protection," Speaker continued. "It would have been a tough job to root them out. Congress did the whole job by amputating their paychecks."

Even the loss of the good men heading OWI field offices is causing a beneficial reaction, Speaker said. They did a good job and as a result important groups in some areas will support congressional restoration of OWI funds when congress comes back to capitol hill. Speaker said most of these directors will be available if a new field force is established.

Regiment Wiped Out

Numbers of war prisoners and large stores of munitions were taken in the Russian advance, it was said.

An unspecified number of towns was taken in an advance north of Orel, which saw 2,000 Germans killed and 39 enemy tanks disabled, the midnight communique said, and the harried Germans were driven out of several strongly-fortified towns east of Orel after the Red army forces smashed across a stream to hammer at the Nazi positions.

The Russians said they destroyed about a regiment of enemy infantry, destroyed or disabled 37 German tanks and captured large quantities of war materials from the Germans on one flank east of Orel, and killed at least 1,500 Germans, destroyed 13 tanks and 32 guns, and took a great number of prisoners in another sector.

"South of Orel, our troops, overcoming stubborn enemy resistance, continued to advance," the war bulletin declared, with the Germans losing more than 1,000 officers and men killed and wounded in futile counter attacks.

Another 34 German tanks and 18 gun batteries were destroyed and more prisoners were taken in the fighting south of Orel, it was said.

Offering more detail on the Soviet thrust in the Belgorod area, Moscow said 400 Germans were killed and 17 tanks and three large guns were disabled.

Advances of from four to six miles were recorded in the north Orel sector, it was declared, bringing the Russian land gains to from 36½ to 66 miles since the beginning of the Red army offensive.

German resistance was heavy, the Russians said, with 10 German counterattacks beaten off during the day as the Soviet troops swept into 30 cities and villages on an arc north of Orel.

Bureau Aids C-C's To Advertise U. P.

Marquette— Chambers of commerce, sectional tourist bureaus and civic associations located in the Upper Peninsula and operating on a non-profit basis are eligible to receive 35 per cent refunds for publishing of advertising folders, pamphlets, maps and stickers, for which $3000.00 has been appropriated this year, George E. Bishop, secretary-manager of the U. P. Development Bureau announces.

In letters to chambers of commerce and other civic organizations throughout the Peninsula, Bishop called for four receipted copies of such bills and explained rules and regulations governing refunds. The Bureau's executive committee will meet here Monday, August 2, for the purpose of auditing bills and certifying amounts of refunds to be paid.

Each year, the Bureau, in addition to advertising the Peninsula through its own funds, allocates refunds to civic organizations for bills covering advertising expenditures. Besides such advertising matter listed above, refunds are granted for bills contracted by civic associations for construction, rent or maintenance of bill boards advertising a portion of the Upper Peninsula which are erected at points outside of northern Michigan. Primary condition governing such refunds is that organizations, through membership or advertising, contribute to the Development Bureau at least $50.00 annually.

can base on Amchitka in the Aleutians were described officially as "a formation." Naval spokesmen did not state the number of planes but such a group was otherwise interpreted authoritatively to mean probably about 12 bombers.

The spokesman did report that the attacking planes had an unusually lucky break in getting clear weather over their targets so that precision bombing was possible. He said there was some indication that wooden buildings ashore were knocked down.

The day before the Paramushiro attack a group of Liberators teamed with Mitchell and Ventura medium bombers to blast the Japanese main camp area and Gertrude cove on Kiska island, only a short distance northwest of Amchitka. Overcast weather prevented observation of results in that attack.

From these two actions it was evident that American forces would not have to wait upon conquest of Kiska to take advantage of their position in the westerr Aleutians to bring pressure on Japan's northern flank. In fact the attack on Paramushiro gave every evidence of marking the beginning of such pressure, to be applied through a campaign of bombings and possibly surface ship raids coordinated with the offensive conducted by General Douglas MacArthur and Admiral William F. Halsey against Japanese positions in the southwest Pacific.

Camp Mail Orderly Is Mental Wizard

Camp Polk, La. (AP)—One of the mental wizards around this camp is Corporal Raymond L. Larson of Council Bluffs, Ia., mail orderly.

He knows every man in his company by sight and can tell, without referring to his pigeonholes, whether each has no letter or nine letters and a newspaper.

He says his toughest days are those when there are only 10 letters for the whole company:

"Then I have to satisfy each man that he doesn't have any. I always take all the letters out of their boxes and shuffle through them right in front of the men. If I were standing on the other side of the counter, I'd expect the same treatment."

LARSEN REPLIES TO TAX QUERIES

Withholding Will Not Excuse Filing Return

Persons whose full current tax liability is collected at the source will still have to file a final return for the year, which will be due next March 15, Roland Larsen, deputy collector of internal revenue, announced yesterday in reply to queries received at the Escanaba office.

In most instances they will not be required to file a declaration of estimated tax for the current year, Larsen said. On their March final return they will compute their exact income and Victory tax liability and take credit for amounts withheld by their employer during the year. For the first year, 1943, they will also take credit for what has been paid toward the 1942 tax.

Liability shown on the return will in most cases vary slightly from the amounts withheld, according to Larsen. Where the withholding exceeds the final liability, the taxpayer will be entitled to a refund or credit. If the final liability is greater than the amount withheld, the taxpayer will make up the difference at that time.

Exemptions

Inquiries have been received also regarding exemptions which husband and wife get under the withholding system when both of them are employed. In cases of this kind one spouse may claim the whole married exxemption, in which event the other one may claim none, or they may divide it equally, Larsen pointed out. taking half, Larsen pointed out.

No other division of the exemption is permitted for purposes of the withholding tax, he said. However, this does not preclude the husband and wife from apportioning the regular income-tax exemption on whatever basis they choose when they file their final returns for the year. Exemption for dependents, however, may be taken only by the person who furnishes their chief support.

Marital Status

Responsibility is put on each employee to file with his employer a so-called withholding exemption certificate, showing his marital status. By reference to these certificates, an employer will know how much exemption to allow each employee in computing his withholding tax. If the employee fails to furnish the certificate, the law requires the employer to withhold 20 per cent of the entire wage or salary.

Larsen stressed the fact that if an employee's marital status changes as a result of marriage, divorce, separation, death, the birth of a child, or a dependent child reaching the age of 18, he is required to file a new exemption certificate with his employer within 10 days, showing his changed status. This new certificate takes effect with respect to the first wages paid on or after the first status determination date, January or July 1, which occurs at least 30 days from the date on which the new certificate is furnished to the employer.

AIDS SERVICE FAMILIES

To the Editor of
Escanaba Daily Press:

In each community of our country, the impact of the war is felt daily in many ways by our fellow citizens. This is especially true of those families who have sons, daughters, brothers, sisters or fathers in the armed forces.

Here in Escanaba we have many servicemen families who frequently feel the need of experienced advice about problems affecting them in connection with the service of their men or women in the armed forces.

Cloverland Post, No. 82 of The American Legion, through its Service Officer, Employment Officer, Child Welfare Chairman, or other of its officials who have interested themselves in the problems of the World War II Serviceman, considers it a privilege to confer and advise with these families who feel in need of such counsel.

This Post has trained personnel who are familiar with such matters as Servicemen's allotments and allowances, National Life Insurance, hospitalization applications and compensation or pension claims, assistance to dependent children and parents and re-employment problems.

Through the agency of this Post, the nation-wide facilities of the Department and National Organizations of the Legion with their skilled full-time personnel is available for the solution of many of the problems which confront our service families.

The name and address of the Service Officer of Post No. 82 is Gerald J. Cleary, 815 Ludington Street. This Service Officer will welcome the opportunity of advising World War II Servicemen families, without cost.

Have a Coca-Cola = Howdy, Neighbor, 'round the world

...or how to make friends at home or abroad

When the American soldier overseas meets up with Coca-Cola, it's like meeting an old pal. Have a "Coke", says he to a stranger, and in three words he has made a new buddy. From Minneapolis to Melbourne, Coca-Cola stands for the pause that refreshes—has become the mark of the good neighbor, the high-sign of the friendly-minded—has spread from Atlanta to the Seven Seas.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called "Coke".

We Must Be Ready

IT MUST be considered a significant fact that Republican leaders of the nation are giving serious thought, a year ahead of their national convention, to post war policies that shall be endorsed by the party at their 1944 convention. It is evident that Republican leaders appreciate the dangers that lie ahead for this nation, after the war is ended, if New Deal theorists are permitted to write the program of America's participation in world affairs.

Meeting in New York this week eastern Republican leaders have framed the outline of a program that will be recommended to the Republican national committee and action along lines that are now suggested, will be considered as certain.

No one will deny the responsibilities that will be faced by this nation in the years that follow the close of the war but it is also recognized that commitments on the part of America must be made by men of sound thought and wide experience in world affairs. Those commitments must not be made by theorists, such as those who directed the economic program of this nation early in the New Deal administration and who are still at the national capital, waiting to take over the world job.

It is this danger toward which the Republican party is today aiming its big guns. For the good of American those guns must be loaded and ready, when the time comes.

Poland Looks Ahead

SOUND judgment and foresight were displayed by Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk in selecting the personnel of the new Polish government in exile. Its political complexion assures a democratic future for Poland. It also gives great promise of amicable but firm relations with the republic's neighbors, particularly Russia.

Appointment of Tadeusz Romer as minister of foreign affairs is exemplary of the good judgment used by the successor of the late Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski. Romer is a diplomat of wide experience. He was Polish ambassador to Japan when thousands of refugees—mainly Jews—reached there. Through his hard work and humanitarian efforts they were able to start life anew in other parts of the world.

Romer was Polish ambassador to Russia when the Soviet government broke off relations over the Polish request that the International Red Cross investigate the allegation that thousands of Polish officers had been massacred in Katyn Forest. Romer was highly regarded in Russia because of his stanch defense of Polish interests. He was not a sail trimmer. He refused to assume any attitude that would give the impression, all too prevalent today among non-Poles largely because of Russian propaganda, that Poland is on trial. Like his cabinet colleagues Romer wants a settlement with Russia as did Gen. Sikorski, but he will not barter his nation's rights to obtain it.

Premier Mikolajczyk shows his foresight in appointing Marjan Seyda, minister of state in charge of preparation for the peace conference, and Karold Popiel, minister of state in charge of planning future administration. Seyda will collect the documentation relating to Poland's historic claims while Popiel will build what amounts to a civil service so that the oppressed of the homeland can be given every possible aid without the slightest delay once liberation is achieved.

Such preparation for the future is an official activity that other governments, especially the great powers, might well adopt. Poland, at least, is not going into the peace unprepared.

AMGOT Takes Charge

ONLY a narrow stretch of the Mediterranean sea separates Sicily from French North Africa but the governments instituted by the United Nations in the invaded Italian island and the liberated French territory are worlds apart, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ironically, the conquered enemies get a much better deal than have our French allies. Perverse as this is, the establishment of a military government in Sicily seems to indicate that we will keep our word to the people of Europe in allowing them to choose their own future political institutions. It also encourages the belief that we have learned a lesson from the sorry political mess that is North Africa.

Although we have made a lot of Gallic Fascists in North Africa our collaborators, the first act of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander as Allied military governor of Sicily included the dissolution of the Fascist party, the annulment of all discriminatory decrees and laws and the suspension of "the power of the crown of Italy x x x during the period of military occupation."

There is a big difference between the employment of administrative and judicial officials (except Fascist party members) in Sicily in order to keep the wheels of government going and the wholesale, indiscriminate use of Vichy and Nazi appointed officials in North Africa. In Sicily the state power will be in the hands of Allied military and civilian officials while in French North Africa it was for long retained by the defeatists and the people who, with rare exceptions, fought Allied liberation last November.

In North Africa we were being more than polite. We were and are carrying out a policy of using the reactionaries because we had plotted with them before the occupation and we may wish to use them as political instruments once France is freed. This policy has created a suspicion not only in France but throughout occupied Europe. The feeling has grown, particularly since we gave our blessing to such discredited personalities as the late Admiral Darlan, ex-Gov. Marcel Peyrouton of Algeria and other men of Vichy, that we would employ the Quislings wherever we found them.

Sicily under Alexander and the new AMGOT (Allied Military Government of Occupied Territory) regime may go a long way to redeem this impression and to underscore our promises of free choice for the liberated people.

As far as Italy is concerned we have made no deals with refugees or exiles. We are not committed beforehand as was the case in North Africa. This action in Sicily precludes the possibility of using a Dino Grandi or a Crown Prince Umberto as our political agent. We bring no Italian Giraud with us. The slate is clean. The Italian people alone shall make the decision.

Into AMGOT have been called men long experienced in administrative, municipal, legal and public health matters. Among them are such persons as former Gov. Charles Poletti of New York, now a lieutenant colonel. Among them are some Virginia for just such work. The British have their counterparts represented in the group.

This is the sort of clean sweep that should have been made in North Africa. We are probably too involved in the muck of French politics to make amends there, but it does not follow that we must use the North African pattern in France itself. The Sicilian model is much to be preferred, not only for France but for all of Europe. Surely we can deal with our allies as well as we treat our enemies.

Where we liberate subjugated nations that have been fighting on our side their people have representation in the AMGOT regimes. But this representation must be from the groups which have remained faithful to the United Nations' cause, not from the Quislings, the defeatists, the opportunists or the indifferent. Otherwise we will surely breed resentment and in some instances possibly civil war or revolution.

This solution of the problem of government in Sicily will go much further toward inspiring the people of Italy to revolt than the Roosevelt-Churchill ultimatum of last week. Here is a demonstration that the promises of the Atlantic Charter are not vain political catch phrases, but a genuine program of action.

You can't blame the German U-boats for preferring to go straight home to straight down.

Dropping in on people usually is a friendly gesture—but Mussolini has reason to have another slant.

When the post-war autos come, why not have the steering wheel in the back seat just to avoid arguments?

WORDS TO WATCH

It is enlightening to read of the code of ethics recently adopted by the Association of Radio News Analysts. The six-part code emphasizes, among other things, the "need of painstaking accuracy, sound judgment, and good taste." Admirable! But in the interest of more accuracy in radio speech I suggest that these commentators add a seventh provision to their code: Buy a dictionary.

These words were mispronounced on a single day by seven leading commentators:

MAINTENANCE was mispronounced "main-TAIN-ance," a very common error. But "-te" cannot spell "tain." Better say: MAIN-tee-nance.

INCOGNITO was mispronounced "in-cog-NY-tuh." No, decidedly. Accent the "cog" and make the "i's" short as in "sit." Say: in-COG-ni-toe.

VULNERAABLE was mispronounced with the "l" silent, as "VUN-er-uh-b'l." Be sure to sound the "l," thus: VULL-ner-uh-b'l.

GIGANTIC was mispronounced "jig-AN-tik." Th efirst syllable should be "jy" to rhyme with "by, my." Say: jy-GAN-tik

ACRIMONY was mispronounced "uh-KRIM-uh-nee." Accent the first and third syllables, thus: Ak'ri-MOE-nee

IRREVOCABLE was mispronounced "ir-ree-VOE-kuh-b'l." Be sure to accent the second syllable, thus: ir-REV-oh-kuh-b'l

COUP D'ETAT, French for "a sudden measure of state," was mispronounced "cope dee-TAY," so help me. The "p" of coup is silent. The "a" of d'etat is almost as flat as in "tab." The final "t" is silent. Say: koo day-TA

Fair Enough

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Throughout the long fight to drive underworld criminals out of positions of power in unions of the American Federation of Labor the cry has been sustained not only by the rascals themselves but by William Green, the president, and Joseph Padway, its general counsel, that the proportion of crooks to honest men among union officials is very small and that their importance in relation to the whole body is exaggerated with intent to injure the cause of the workers, in their dealings with organized industry.

The proportion of crooks to honest men in commanding positions is not small but appallingly large but having made that stipulation I will pass on to another phase of the argument.

My proposition is that Mr. Green has shown himself to be a friend and defender of bad men and should be disavowed for the good of the cause and Padway with him for the same reason. I do not give either of these men the benefit of a doubt. I do not excuse Green on the ground that he is a weak and placative politician or Padway on the ground that, as a lawyer specializing in labor union law, he has a right to counsel crooked unioneers. Green is not weak, but if he were that would be a disqualification rather than an excuse. Padway has every lawyer's right to sell his counsel to any client but not to work both sides of the street by which I mean to allege that he has worked for enemies of labor within the union movement while pretending to speak for the mass of workers.

—SIDES WITH CRIMINALS—

These two men have power and influence in the AFL equal to scores of obscure and honest local officials of unions.

Yet, Green has repeatedly sided with criminals and with other union racketeers who were plainly exploiters and oppressors of the rank and file, although not legally convicted of crimes, to the detriment of the workers. And Padway's clientele has included unions ruled by some of the most disgraceful rogues in American history, including the stagehands of Bioff and Browne, and the Building Service Employees Union of George Scalise.

In a St. Louis case in which a suffering group of workers tried to break the power of John P. Nick, who was a vice president of the Stagehands' union, Green ordered the Central Trades Union Council of the AFL to exclude the Rebels' delegates an drecognize Nick's delegates although the local courts had sustained the Rebels and had held that Nick was a grafter and extortioner. Green ruled that the Rebels' delegates were not in good standing with their international union of which Padway was general counsel for a large price. But the reason why they were not in good standing was that Padway's friends in control of the international were villainous crooks who saw to it that the Rebel delegates were rejected in favor of Nick's agents. Nick later got five years in prison for racketeering.

John C. Knox, judge of the United States district court for the Southern district of New York, devotes a chapter to racketeering in the AFL in his recent book, "Order in the Court," based on his experience in the trial of Bioff and Browne and similar cases. In that chapter he reveals further proof of Green's moral and civic unfitness for his position of trust and power. Following the conviction of a band of thoroughly vicious criminals who had resorted to "bombing, slashing, beating and acid throwing" in a campaign of "unbelievable viciousness," Green nevertheless went to Judge Knox to intercede for them on the plea that they had done "much good work" in opposing Communism in the fur trade.

"He seemed entirely willing," Judge Knox writes, "despite the verdict, to give credence to the stories the convicted men had told.

—CITES ZEIGLER CASE—

In the case of Dennis Bruze Zeigler, of Chicago, an honest citizen, a good union man, a brave fighter for clean unionism and the father of 11 children, Green refused to help the rank and file in their fight with William E. Maloney, the head of the gigantic racket known as the international union of operating engineers which is notoriously corrupt and brutal. Following the termination of their correspondence in which Green told Zeigler to go to the racketeers themselves for his redress, Zeigler was murdered on the street. The night before he was murdered he told an agent of the treasury intelligence unit that he had been chased by two of the high racketeers whom he had been fighting and that one of them had yelled "I will kill you yet." The motive of the crime was not robbery and Zeigler obviously was on a spot because he had given information to the treasury regarding the incomes of certain racketeers in the union. Yet, neither of the men that Zeigler named was even arrested and Green later made an official public appearance at a social brawl in Chicago in honor of Maloney, and praised him extravagantly as a man of honor and integrity. The department of justice showed no interest in the martyrdom of the treasury's brave, voluntary informant in a tax inquiry.

Green also attended the Stagehands' convention in Louisville in 1940, when the union had become famous for its corruption and said "you have inspired me with a determination to go out and defend our great movement as I have never defended it before. I hope and pray that the laboring men will become so politically and economically conscious as to elect men to Congress like our great Congressman Schulte, who came from your ranks."

The Magician

Good Morning!

By The Bugler

CLAIM HERO — When Elijah Petonquot, Indian youth of the Hannahville settlement near Harris in Menominee county, mopped up on a bunch of Japs in the battle of Attu, the army gave his residence as Bark River. That is the mailing address. And so the Associated Press reported the Indian hero as of Bark River.

Dunathan

Into the Daily Press office the other night came a resident of Harris, who protested that Bark River was claiming something which doesn't belong to it. The Bugler believes the reason for handing Petonquot over to Bark River should be explained, so that Harris and Wilson folk won't think it was Bark River's fault.

"You see, when one of the Hannahville Indians gets into trouble with the law, he is always described as an Indian from Harris. Now when one of them is a hero, Bark River gets the credit. I thought you might be able to straighten this out," explained the Harris resident.

Elijah Petonquot, who has been awarded the Purple Heart, belongs not only to Bark River and Harris—he belongs to America. Uncle Sam also is proud to claim him as of his own.

MICHIGAN MANAGER — Escanaba residents whose memory of local people goes back 15 years or more will recall Edward Hodgkins, former Escanaba man. His father had a farm at Pine Ridge. Hodgkins is now Michigan manager for the J. D. Adams company, manufacturers of highway equipment.

FORGOTTEN—Some time back The Bugler wrote about an old-fashioned Fourth of July. It stirred local memories and brought from Deputy Sheriff John Frederickson the comment that The Bugler had overlooked one event that helped to round out an old-fashioned Fourth here in Escanaba. It was the annual tug-o'-war staged at South Park.

Declining popularity of South Park is understandable—but it may come back again in popularity in the future. The shore south of the park is now city owned and is being built up by the city, part of a long-term plan for overall improvement of the area.

IN MINIATURE—There comes to The Bugler's desk a tiny copy of the Escanaba Daily Mirror of August 24, 1909—a copy only about four by six inches in size. The reduced print has to be read with a magnifying glass. The little souvenir paper was put out by the Daily Mirror during fair week, and the copy now before The Bugler comes from Mrs. H. L. Holderman.

The days of trick journalistic promotion are just about ended. A newspaper rises or falls on its merit alone. No amount of promotion can for long hold a reading audience. Come to think of it—we may yet come to printing our newspapers small — witness the shortage of newsprint paper and the government's call upon newspapers for paper saving.

NOT THE LUNGS—The Bugler erred the other day when he wrote that a drowning person's lungs fills with water. His attention was directed to the error by Clarence Schrader, member of the Escanaba fire department and a First Aid instructor of the American Red Cross.

Schrader knows what he's talking about, both from experience and "book larnin". And Schrader says that when a drowning victim is given artificial respiration the water that flows out of the mouth and nose comes from the stomach—not the lungs. The lungs themselves contain only a teaspoonful or less of water.

So The Bugler hastens to set the record straight.

OLDER METHODS—In talking with Schrader, however, The Bugler learned about some of the once-fashionable methods of reviving the apparently drowned—and why they were sometimes effective. At that time, of course, the methods were looked upon with superstitious acceptance, rather than a true knowledge of why they worked.

Those who can remember the days of ladies' bathing suits with long skirts, stockings and shoes as part of the costume, will recall that rolling the drowning victime back and forth over a barrel was credited with saving quite a few lives. What happened was the barrel rolling alternately compressed the chest walls, was a crude forerunner of artificial respiration.

Another scene once enacted on American beaches during the swimming season was the scream for "help", followed by the dash into the water of "our hero." While the rescue was under way everybody started shouting "Get a horse!" One of the horses was unhitched from the phaeton under the trees and was rushed to the shore. Why would a horse be wanted in case of drowning?

Because most folks in those days implicitly believed that a drowning victim would revive if he were laid face down across a horse's back, and the horse was put to a trot up and down the shore. It wasn't the fresh air that did the trick, or the very uncomfortable position. What happened was the jolting trot of the horse compressed the chest walls at regular intervals, helped start breathing if a spark of life remained.

The barrel and the horse have been superseded by the trained life saver and the mechanical resuscitator. More people swim and swim better than ever before—but drowning is just as final an accident as it ever was.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington—With Allied troops storming Sicily, French lessons from the current row over Generals DeGaulle and Giraud are vitally important today—(1) as an example of the mistakes we should avoid in Italy; (2) as an example of how not to get divided into two opposing camps at home.

Pearson

American - British opinion already is almost as divided over DeGaulle and Giraud as in France. If we are not careful the same dissension may occur over different political factions in Italy.

To get the full benefit of current French lessons it is necessary to go back to the days shortly after the Fall of France when the Allies needed at least one French leader around whom to urge the freeing of France. General DeGaulle, a relatively low-ranking officer who had distinguished himself as a tank expert, was the only man available.

He was not the best choice, but there was no other. So he was built up as a symbol of Free France. Very soon he turned out to be a temperamental, someties conceited, always strong-willed symbol. Among other things, he wrote a letter to the British and American Governments comparing Allied strategy to a drum and saying: "No one man is beating the drum. But a host of beetles are bouncing up and down on it, and they think they are beating it." (At the time a lot of people thought he was right).

—CROSS OF LORRAINE—

Then, in the summer of 1942, Churchill and DeGaulle had a stormy session in Egypt over Syria. DeGaulle criticized British military leadership and offered to take over the entire command in North Africa. Afterward Churchill, referring to the cross on the Free French flag told friends:

"The Cross of Lorraine is the hardest one I have to bear."

Returning to London, Churchill wired DeGaulle to come to London to discuss Madagascar. Nothing happened. Then Foreign Minister Eden telegraphed. Finally DeGaulle wired that he would come to London at his own convenience, that he was going to Central Africa first, and would discuss Madagascar when he returned.

Up to this point, the British alone had to bear the Cross of Lorraine. But when President Roosevelt went to Casablanca he soon soured on DeGaulle even more than Churchill had. At their meeting, DeGaulle assumed a stiff-necked, haughty attitude, described himself as a combination of Joan d'Arc and Clemenceau.

The President has criticized DeGaulle and has been mimicking him to friends ever since.

But, for the French people, DeGaulle remained a great symbol. He was the one man who had stood out and urged that the people fight for France. This was the propaganda the British themselves spread; this was the symbol they had built.

They had built even better than they realized. So, because he meant much to the people of France, because he was a symbol also to other exile governments, he continued to get British support, despite the opposition of the U. S. State Department and the criticism of FDR.

—CHURCHILL GOT MAD—

But last June, the straw almost snapped when Churchill went to North Africa. There he had another bitter argument with DeGaulle. Even Foreign Minister Eden came to North Africa at Churchill's suggestion to fire DeGaulle. Eden, however, would not agree. He said that DeGaulle was too important a symbol, meant too much to the people of France. The British could not tear down what they had built up.

So Churchill and Eden split. But Churchill, returning to London, called a press conference, gave out a scathing bill of particulars against the Free French leader. He said he was tired of politics and was going to give the facts. Whereupon, he called DeGaulle a latent fascist, chiefly ambitious for himself; said he had stirred up the French and the Arabs in Syria against the British; said he favored Franco-Russian cooperation for the future control of Europe.

Since then, the situation has become worse. DeGaulle meddled in French Army affairs, wanted to take over command. This was resented by other French commanders, sticklers for rank, who pointed out DeGaulle was only a brigadier general and a tank expert.

Sternly obdurate, at heart a Calvinist, he has refused to compromise in anything. But as he has lost prestige with British and American leaders, he has, if anything, increased prestige with the French people. They regard him as their real military saviour.

So Churchill and Roosevelt cannot remove the "saviour of France." Besides, as Charles Davila, head of the exiled Roumanian Government, remarks:

"They say DeGaulle is difficult! Of course he is! So are all men of principle."

Note: Already some of these same problems are being faced in regard to a new leader for Italy.

WMC Disfavors Mothers Working In War Plants

Stating that a misundersanding apparently exisits concerning the War Manpower Commission's policy on the employment of mothers, Montague A. Clark, district WMC director, has pointed out that the manpower agency does not urge mothers of young children to work in an area until other sources of labor supply have been exhausted.

"In many cases, overcrowded housing and overtaxed transportation make immigration of labor highly undesirable. When this is the case, me must use every possible source of labor available locally," Clark said.

"Thus far, we have made no effort to recruit mothers of young children in Michigan," he declared. "Of course, if such women feel that they want to work, we shall not deprive them of an opportunity for training and employment.

"In many communities, excellent facilities are provided for the care of small children while their mothers are working," Clark explained. "Day nurseries for youngsters from two to five years old and canteens for school-aged children are being operated by a number of communities in cooperation with government and industry. They supply wholesome foood, recreation, and adequate supervision by trained personnel at nominal costs."

The WMC director said that women without children under 14 are being recruited actively in Michigan industrial areas.

"The labor supply picture already is becoming critical in several of Michigan's industrial areas," he said. "We know that the demands of our expanding war industries will increase, and that the armed forces will continue to syphon off manpower. We shall have to look largely to women to fill the new jobs and to replace men called to the colors.

"Manpower authorities feel that women with young children owe their first duty to the suitable care of those children in their own homes," Clark explained. "All other sources of labor supply should be used first. Only when these other sources have been exhausted will we encourage the recruitment of such women."

THE STORY: Lincoln Eliott, American, decides to have one final fling at adventure before settling down to his important duties as the newly-appointed military governor of a French colony in Central Africa. Disguising himself as the Arab, Terek el-Medjahiri, he learns of a dervish plot against the government. He determines to find its prime mover, the hykmoot ameez, and kill him. On the way to Lake Tchad, he meets a caravan of Bedawins who seem afraid of him.

THE DESERT

CHAPTER X

Rashid went on to say that he and his companions had left Mounetville quite early this morning. They had traveled fast, anxious to return to their tents.

The reason for their haste?

It seemed that a servant at the governor's palace had overheard a telephone conversation shortly after midnight of the preceding day. A prominent foreign official had arrived by plane from Dakar. He had wished to speak to sidi Elliot at once about some urgent affairs; had been informed by one of the Christian kapitans—Pelletier was his jaw-breaking, alien name—that the sidi had left town and was not expected back for quit a while.

Where, precisely, was the governor? Why was he not at his post at such a crucial time?

Well—Pelletier had said— the matter was too confidential to be discussed over the telephone. He was sending a car over to the airport to fetch the other. Then he would explain . . .

Lincoln smiled.

There was the note which he had tossed through Pelletier's window; and the latter had needed time to figure out a plausible cause or, rather, a plausible lie for his chief's absence.

But, judging from what Rashid related, in the meanwhile, thanks to the servant who had overheard the telephone conversation and promptly spread the news, gossip had been rife, speedily, in spite of the late hour; and—added the Bedawin—it was being whispered that the governor had been either kidnaped or murdered.

"Thus, surely," Rashid continued, "soon, soon, the feringhee police will be searching the town. They will be like mad, frightened jackals—biting right and left—suspecting everybody—suspecting honest, simple men like ourselves—suspecting, chiefly, men like you, O dervish! Men who are alone, unknown, and who can show no cause for their coming and going."

"The more reason for taking me with you," replied the American.

They made one of the camels kneel down, unloaded its pack of salt and printed cotton and dried apricot paste, distributed it among the other animals, and helped Lincoln mount.

It had been a good many years since he had ridden one, and the first sensation was not altogether pleasant: with himself in the hard, peaked saddle, and the camel, grunting pessimistically through its large-pored, flabby Semitic nose, still kneeling on the ground, its gawky legs folded under its belly, occasionally turning and eyeing him with haughty, snobby malevolence.

Then there was Rashid's piercing yell:

"Arise, yah bint— O daughter! Arise, O princess in Islam!"

And when the camel did not obey:

"Wah! Arise, A grandmother of 17 exceedingly evil odors! Arise and on your way, O twin-sister to an Egyptian bawd!"

He whacked it across its lean flank. The other two Bedawins lent enthusiastic assistance. They pushed and shoved and kicked, with more shouts and highly spiced imprecations.

The camel snarled and spat. But, at last, after an unsuccessful attempt to bite the American in the hip, it got up suddenly on its hind legs, almost shooting him over its swanlike neck, then on its front legs, almost precipitating him across its moth-eaten tail.

Rashid tossed Lincoln a pointed thorn stick.

"Use it," he advised, "nor sparingly! This beast is devoid of both decency and manners."

And so, stoutly belabored, the camel broke into the jambaz, the pacing, rolling gait which looks so slow and clumsy, but will, in the long run, outdistance anything on four feet.

A few hours later, the heart of the desert came to them with orange and purple, spawning its brittle eternities; with a carved aridity, an enormous, sterile monotony floating on vague horizons; with a profound, annhilating solitude and silence; with the formless of the illimitable.

It came with its sense that here was life, but never birth. It came with its desolate grandeurs, its sublime austerities, its premonition of the disappearance of all existence from the face of the earth.

So insolently barren and naked it was. So completely lifeless. Humanity and its endeavors—the four men trotting astride their shaggy mounts, the tinkle-tinkle of the camels' bells, the soft thud of the animals' padded feet, the creaking of the saddles—seemed like an intrusion, a trivial and futile challenge to the infinite, sneering wilderness.

The Bedawins felt it, as nomads do.

They were bred to the sterile desert. They knew no other life; wished for no other life. Yet they hated it, feared it. And so they were brooding and morose; were silent.

So was the American.

He was occupied with his reflections. More than ever was he convinced that he had chosen the right, indeed the only path: he must seek out the hykmoot ameez, the Man of Mystery, and kill him.

The large poster above, almost eight feet long, in full color, is the dramatic War Bond window background at the local Penney store, this week, featuring photographs of local men and women in the armed forces.

J. C. PENNEY STORE HONORS LOCAL HEROES AS PART OF JULY WAR BOND AND STAMP DRIVE!

Window Display of Service Men's Photographs Keynotes Third Week of Sales Campaign!

THIS WEEK, the windows of the J. C. Penney Company department store show pictures of local men and women serving with the armed forces. Penney's entire staff is dedicated to the sale of War Bonds and Stamps in their honor. "Bonds Save Lives" is the selling theme, here, and in over 1600 other communities where Penney stores are located.

Since the first of July, all Penney stores have been conducting an intensive drive aimed at selling $10,000,000.00 worth of War Bonds and Stamps during the month. Last July, Penney stores, with a goal of $1,200,000.00, sold $8,422,553.85.

The pictures of service men on display at Penney's here have been borrowed for the occasion from local people — relatives and friends. Included among them are photographs of employees of the store now in service.

Each week during July, Penney stores have emphasized in their window displays and in their advertising that War Bonds and Stamps can buy the fighting equipment that will win final victory. This week, the emphasis is on life-saving needs — ambulances, rafts, and parachutes.

This year, like last, the Penney Company's Bond drive centers around a sales contest in which all Penney stores and employees compete for state and national prizes.

Here are some of the ways, according to Manager Jackson, that the local Penney store is going all-out to win:

Every person in our store is trying harder to sell war bonds and stamps than any other item we have in the store. They are doing this first, because they realize the importance of such a job and because they want to do all they can to hasten the return of the brothers, sweethearts, husbands, and sons in the service. Secondly, they are out to win some of the prizes that are being offered by our company and by our own store here. Buy your bonds and stamps from your favorite Penney salesperson and help in two ways.

PARTY LINE NEIGHBORS can be helpful, too!

YOU know people in your community who are always ready to help others — always courteous and unselfish. Everybody likes them. They're good neighbors.

Now that more and more families are being asked to share party lines, good telephone neighbors are sure to be appreciated. People who are friendly and considerate in their use of a party line help to make everybody's service better.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

A GOOD-NEIGHBOR CREED

A good party line neighbor thinks of it this way: "Somebody else on my line may be waiting to make a call, so I won't talk any longer than I have to. When the line is in use and I'm waiting my turn, I won't interrupt. When I finish a call, I'll make sure I've hung up properly, because if one instrument is left 'off the hook' it puts all the telephones on the line out of service."

FOREST FIRES ARE SABOTAGE

THE FOREST FIRE PREVENTION CREED

1. I Will smoke in the woods ONLY while halted in a safe place, completely cleared of dry or inflammable material.
2. I Will break all burned matches in two before I throw them away, and WILL NEVER throw pipe tobacco, cigar butts, or cigarette stubs into brush, leaves or pine needles.
3. I Will scrape away all inflammable material before building a campfire then build it in a hole dug in the center of this cleared space.
4. I Will put out campfires before I leave—stir the coals while soaking them with water; wet the ground around the fire; make certain the last spark is dead.
5. I Will Never burn brush in windy weather, or without plenty of help.
6. I Will put out any small fires I find, or report them AT ONCE by phoning the Ranger or Fire Warden.
7. I Will remember that a burning match, a glowing cigarette, or a smouldering campfire can be just as dangerous as an incendiary bomb . . . that careless matches aid the axis.

IN PEACETIME, 200,000 forest fires a year attack the nation's forest resources . . . must be combatted and prevented in every way possible by patriotic citizens. In wartime, these forest fires are SABOTAGE. For they destroy timber vital to the war effort . . . They may threaten military and industrial establishments . . . forest fire smoke may even mask enemy attack or interfere with our air operations! And with the threat of incendiary bombs and ground sabotage, the need for preventing—and fighting—forest fires is even more imperative.

Do your share to fight this dreaded home front enemy. Follow simple Forest Fire Prevention rules: Be careful with burning matches, cigarettes, pipe ashes and camp fires. Put out small forest fires, and report others to the nearest state fire warden. Make sure that safe fire lines are built around saw mills, logging camps, etc. Inspect your fire hazards. Comply with state fire prevention laws. Remember that until we win this war, every man-made forest fire is an Axis Victory . . . it's up to you to help stamp them out!

Joseph Raiche, proprietor of a local tavern, was arraigned before Justice of Peace Oliver C. Estenson on a charge of selling to minors and upon his plea of guilty was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs.

WATCH HEALTH ON VACATIONS

Precautions To Be Used On Trips Outlined By State

Not very many vacationers will find it possible to follow the lure of the open road this year. Instead, the Michigan department of health expects that there will be days devoted to simpler pleasures rediscovered by the modern families. At the same time, the state health department warned the vacationers that they must accept new responsibility for their own health protection this summer.

The health department believes that gas rationing can result in more drownings as bathers seek smaller, unguarded swimming places closer to their homes. Deaths from drownings rose to 316 last year in the state, from 240 the preceding year. Carelessness and foolhardiness claim the lives of many bathers, the department warned. It suggested the following rules:

Do not go in the water for at least an hour after meals or when overheated.

Get out at once if fatigue or chill is felt.

Stay away from treacherous currents or undertow.

Let children wade only where they are sure there are no holes.

Look before you dive.

Learn how to save lives of the near-drowned.

Do not swim below a sewer outlet, there is a serious risk of getting one of the water-borne diseases.

Vacationers are being urged to assure themselves of the safety of their milk supplies. Pasteurized milk is safest. However, if raw milk is the only kind obtainable, health can be protected if the milk is brought to the boiling point and cooled immediately. This kills disease-producing organisms.

Safest sources of drinking water are municipal water supplies. If you are not too sure about a well, boil all water used for drinking purposes. To assure its safety for other uses, add three to six drops of any of the common liquid bleaches, such as chlorax or roman cleanser, to each gallon of clear water. The water should be stirred after the solution has been added and allowed to stand for 10 minutes.

Foods should be refrigerated and protected from flies. All vegetables and fruits should be washed well before using. Immunization against typhoid fever is recommended for all persons who are going into areas where water and food supplies may be of doubtful quality.

Sunburn can cause discomfort which will lessen vacation enjoyment. Severe sunburn can have serious consequences, and vacationers are advised by the department to proceed slowly in acquiring a sun tan.

For the person who plans to spend his vacation on a farm or at work in a Victory Garden, the state health department urges the use of first aid training for even slight injuries which break the skin. Such injuries should be attended to properly and promptly, for tetanus, commonly known as lockjaw, can develop from contact with the soil.

Proper disposal of garbage and wastes, in camping areas, is essential. Water-tight and fly-tight containers should be provided and emptied frequently. It is safest to cover such wastes with at least six inches of earth when disposing of them.

CHURCH'S PART IN ARMY TOPIC

To Show War Movies; Interesting Questions Discussed Thursday

Russell G. Blank, southwestern executive of the Bible Meditation League, will be the speaker Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church, the Rev. Peter Bissett, church pastor, announced yesterday.

Mr. Blank will present a program which will include moving pictures of actual war scenes. His address also will stress the part which churches have in contacts with servicemen and women and moral conditions around army camps. He will answer a wide variety of questions which people are asking about the spiritual side of army life.

The organization which he represents was founded in Columbus, Ohio, in 1923 by Don R. Falkenberg, now national president of the Bible Meditation League and nationally known as a Bible lecturer and evangelist. The program of work includes the winning of individuals to daily reading of the Scriptures and the presenting to every pledger of daily reading of the New Testament, a copy of the New Testament.

Bible work with university students, over the radio, in the civilian conservation corps when it was functioning, in Nigeria, with the army and elsewhere throughout the nation has been included on the organization's program.

On Heroic Helena Sunk In Pacific; Schneider Is Safe

Leo F. Schneider, seaman first class, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schneider, South Fourth street, was aboard the U. S. S. Helena when the cruiser went down fighting under enemy fire in Kula Gulf July 6 but he notified his parents by cablegram received Monday night that he was alive and well.

According to the message he was one of 160 men who landed on an island and were later picked up by American forces.

The Helena was sunk in the pre-dawn darkness on July 6 after the ship had sunk at least two Japanese cruisers and two destroyers before it went to the bottom with its guns still firing. One of the Jap destroyers was sunk after the Helena's bow had been blown off.

The cruiser was the only American ship lost in a naval battle in the narrow waters between the north end of New Georgia and Kolombangara Island in which from nine to eleven Japanese warships were sunk. More than 600 of the Helena's crew were rescued.

The American victory prevented large scale reenforcements from reaching the Japs on New Georgia Island where the Americans are attempting to seize the enemy air base at Munda in hard fighting.

Duck Hunters Get Extra Half Hour This Fall; Wildfowl Plentiful

HELP EXPECTED ON AMMUNITION

Great Southward Flight Of Ducks And Geese Is Predicted

Washington, July 20. (AP)—Early rising sportsmen will get in an extra half-hour of hunting daily during the open season on migratory game birds this year.

The 1943 hunting regulations, announced by Interior Secretary Ickes, permit shooting to begin a half-hour before sunrise, 30 minutes earlier than last season. As last year, it must end at sunset.

This good news for the nation's 8,500,000 bird hunters was accompanied by word from Ickes' fish and wildlife service that game stocks this season would be "decidedly big" with the "greatest southward flight of ducks and geese in a couple of decades." Normally 15 to 20 million are bagged annually.

Regulations Eased

Furthermore, it was reported that the government probably would make some additional ammunition available to sportsmen, although "not much" should be expected. Wild life service officials expressed belief that many hunters already are well stocked.

All in all, they said, it should be a "very good season" for those who have plenty of shells — and can find the time and gasoline to get out hunting.

The fall 70-day hunting season begins September 25 in the northern zone, October 15 in the intermediate zone, and November 2 in the southern zone.

The new regulations, with an eye to the meat shortage, permit sportsmen to retain birds lawfully taken as long as 45 days—15 more than last year—after the close of the season in the state where the kill was made.

HITTING TOPPED BY MODEST .333

Chicago, July 20 (AP) — Those leading American League batting averages have quit looking like a war worker's income tax and have begun to resemble the hitting marks of Joe Shortstop from the corner sandlot team—much to the distress of such young men as Guy Curtright, Vern Stephens and Dick Wakefield.

Where once the league's statistician was privileged to compile such remarkable figures as "Stephens, .440," "Higgins, .363," and "Hockett, .342," he sat down today and scrawled off "Curtright, Chicago, .333; Stephens, St. Louis, .327, and Wakefield, Detroit, .323," without once referring to his tables on astronomical mathematics.

Even so, the fact that Guy Curtright, the White Sox rookie who took such a long time achieving sufficient times at bat to rank among the leaders, is still in front of the field, despite his modest .333. Vern Stephens of the Browns, the day-in, day-out leader all season until Curtright "arrived," is second at .327 and Dick Wakefield of the Tigers is clinging to third place with a .323 mark.

That left over places in the top ten to Oris Hockett of Claveland at .315; Luke Appling of Chicago at .309; Bob Johnson of Washington at .296; Pinky Higgins of Detroit at .294; Bill Johnson of New York at .293; Roy Cullenbine of Cleveland at .289; and Chet Laabs of St. Louis at .288.

Wakefield remained ahead in total hits with 109, Stephens in home runs with 13, and Etten in runs batted in with 58. Ken Keltner of Cleveland was credited with the most doubles at 25 and Johnny Lindell of New York and Rudy York of Detroit was tied in triples at seven. The 24 stolen bases by George Case of Washington were tops in pilfering.

Pitching honors continued to rest with Orval Grove of the Chicago White Sox and Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers. Grove had the best winning mark with eight triumphs and no defeats, and Newhouser led in strikeout with 93.

Argentina Pushes Egg Dehydration

Camp Clairborne, La. (AP)—Corporal Henry A. Rowse recalls Greenland as a country of vast crevices, beer-loving natives and delicious birds that can be hunted with rocks.

Back from nearly two years service with the United States troops there, Rowse recalls seeing a plane trying to land on an ice cap:

Male Greenlanders used to vencrevice and was never seen again."

"It simply disappeared into a gentina can produce dry eggpowder at a price substantially lower than the majority of egg-producing countries in the world, a thriving warborne industry has been developed here, which finds a ready market abroad.

Prior to the war, Argentina exported from 40 to 50 million dozens of fresh eggs annually, but the growing lack of shipping space in refrigerator boats, which are indispensable to the transport of fresh eggs, forced the local industry to seek other means of shipment.

Army-Navy Game Should Be Played, Martin Believes

BY WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, July 20 (AP)— Nobody in authority yet has said that the Army-Navy football game might not be played this year, so now would seem to be a good time to put in a plug for it, as it's always a good idea to start moving while the other guy still is fumbling for his shootin' iron.

This is strictly a "who said I snitched the watch is a liar" attitude, as nobody has accused anybody of anything or suggested that the game should not be played, but there will be objections raised by the antis. There were last year, and the same gents still are around.

Transportation No Problem

Frankly, we can't see any harm in playing the game. The two schools are going to play football, so they migh as well play each other as anyone else.

The major objection last year was based on the transportation problem, which was neatly skirted by playing the game in comparative secrecy at Annapolis, Md.

If the crowd still is the main objection, the situation could be handled by playing the game without spectators, as after all a crowd of 10,000 or 100,000 is just a man alone in a telephone booth insofar as general interest is concerned. That is, the people who actually could see the game under any conditions would be a negligible quantity compared with the millions who follow it by press and radio.

As far as transporting the teams to the arena is concerned, that is a minor problem. They even could get a squad in a horse car if necessary, if the race people would let them move out the nags for a little while. We've seen the time when an American horse car would seem quite a luxury. Those French corn cribs on wheels were no bargain.

However, we don't think the transportataion of the teams would enter into any argument, as the baseball teams still go around. In fact, in the case of the Dodgers, they go 'round and 'round.

So the sole objection seems to be the crowd as it pertains to the transportation problem. There would seem to be three alternatives in this situation.

Mead Favors Crowd

First, they could stage the game in a speakeasy manner, without spectators, with the nation at large and our far-flung armed forces being given vivid descriptions. After all, that's all they get anyway, except for the 10,000 or 100,000 who might ordinarily see the game.

They might hold it with the attendance rigidly restricted, as last year. And lastly, they might throw the gates wide open and strive for as large an attendance as possible, and to heck with everything.

Senator Mead (D-N. Y.) is one who advocates a bumper attendance, the crowd, under his theory, coming from the large city in which the game might be held. He suggests an attendance of from 75,000 to 100,000 to raise a respectable sum of money, and in advocating a crowd of that size he automatically limits the sites in which the game might be held, as you can just about count the stadiums of that size in the country without taking off your shoes.

You have the stadium at Philadelphia, and Soldier's Field in Chicago, and Ohio State stadium, and the Pasadena Rose Bowl and New Orleans Sugar Bowl fields, and Yankee stadium, just to name a few that comes to mind. There are some others, but not many. In fact, Senator Mead's own Buffalo district has a stadium which would like to be filled. We don't know how many that one holds. The senator couldn't be putting in a plug for his district, could he?

Anyway, this all conjecture just to beat the gun on objections which are sure to come. We have a hunch the game will be played.

MASS ATHLETIC MEET TONIGHT

Three City Playgrounds Enter Teams At Royce Park

The annual playground mass meet for boys will be held at the Royce park playground tonight beginning at 6 o'clock. Harold Cass, playground director, will conduct the event.

Competition will be in two classes. The senior division includes boys 15 years of age and under and the junior division is for boys 12 years of age and under. Events will be standing broad jump, backward basketball throw, ten trips, and shuttle relay. Performances of a six man team in each of the events will determine the score for each playground with the playground scoring the largest number of points in all of the four events in each of the two divisions being declared the winner of that class.

According to Cass, the host playground will have a powerful team in each division. The senior team is paced by Jack Schils, last year's winner of the city recreation department's 1942 sports trophy awarded for outstanding performance in athletics and other events. Also on the team will be Clifford Weir who has smashed several all-time records in the annual athletic contest conducted on playgrounds during the summer, and other outstanding athletes including Ted Chapekis, Jack Finn, Gordon Schils and Bob Dufour.

The junior team is composed of Wayne Sundquist, Gary Abrahamson, Harold "Bud" Weber, Edward Goslin, Gerald Harris and Harold Pearson. Most of these boys are record breakers in some of the athletic contest events or are prominent athletes representing Royce park in softball and other inter-playground and city-wide contests.

According to Paul Vardigan and Mrs. Leona Erickson, directors at Webster and Ludington park, their playgrounds will also be represented with strong teams and exceptionally keen competition is expected with the strong possibility that new individual records will be set in several of the events.

JUNIORS LOSE AT STEPHENSON

Five Run Barrage Beats Escanaba Youngsters In 7th Inning

Stephenson thumped the Escanaba Juniors Sunday at Stephenson in an exhibition game, 8 to 4. The Steves trailed 3 to 2 until the seventh on the strength of a three-run blast by the Juniors in the third, but in the seventh Manager Mike Strohl's boys cut loose for five runs and victory.

Martin limited the Juniors to four hits and fanned 12, while Beck of Escanaba was nicked for 13 hits and he whiffed 13 batters. Martin contributed a triple, while Truitt and Beck smacked out doubles.

BUSINESS PERKS UP

Don't let that mounting temperature reading fool you into believing that sport fans haven't got around yet to serious thinking about the approaching football season. From the Green Bay Packers' office comes a report that ticket sales are booming for the Packers-Chicago Bears game at City stadium Sept. 26. This will be the official league opener for the two teams and it is virtually a certainty that the game will be a sellout, as usual, with all choice seats, at least, sold out weeks in advance.

It isn't only the fans, either, who are thinking about the 1943 season. Baby Ray, the Packers' giant tackle, has written to Trainer Bud Jorgenson to send him his football shoes and pants so that he can get in some extra workouts at Ray's home in Nashville, Tennessee. Jorgenson has dispatched the football equipment, together with wishes for "happy workouts and a successful season". Ray is too tall for military service. Ray Riddick, the Packers' hard charging end, won't be with the squad this fall. He has received an appointment with the U. S. Navy.

GOOD SHOWING

The Escanaba Juniors, composed of the pick of the players in the junior league, made a very creditable showing at Stephenson Sunday, despite an 8-4 defeat. With a lineup of 15, 16 and 17 year olds, the juniors faced a team of much older and experienced players and for six and a half innings, the local lads kept pace with the Steves. They were leading, 3-2, in fact, when the blowup came in the last of the seventh. Stephenson scored five runs in that frame to sew up the game. Lack of hitting power, a mark of inexperience, was evidenced, however, the juniors getting only four hits to 13 for Stephenson. Despite the fact that he was nicked for 13 safeties, Beck turned in a very creditable mound performance for the juniors. He got one strikeout for each hit off him . . . 13 whiffs.

GORDON'S PHILOSOPHY

If you were a big league ball player and you came to bat with two out in the ninth with the opposing pitcher only one man—you—away from a no-hit game, what would you do? Would you tap the pitch for an easy out or would you take a healthy cut, hoping to drive a hit? Joe Gordon of the Yanks was in this spot on July 8. The pitcher was Orval Grove of the White Sox. Gordon socked the pitch for a two-bagger, spoiling Grove's no-hitter. Gordon drew a round of boos for doing the very thing that the Yanks are paying him to do. Gordon explained it this way: "I couldn't go up to the plate and do anything but try and get on base. Sure, I'd like to see the young fellow get along, but that doesn't mean I'd lay down to make a no-hitter possible."

That the Yankee star has the right slant on the situation must be evident to anyone who makes a fair appraisal of the incident. Had Gordon deliberately laid down on the job just to give Grove a no-hitter, the performance would have been tainted and not worth a spot in the record book. Moreover, it would not have been a credit to Gordon, who, after all, is working for the Yankees and not the Chicago White Sox.

Junior Hardball Teams Need Men

An Army - Navy game in the junior hardball league was called off last night because of a lack of players, and a call has been sent out for more men to save these two teams in the league.

Beck continued his strikeout string on the Coastguard team last night by whiffing 12 batters as the Guards took the Marines 9 to 3. The winners had 11 hits and one error and the Marines 5 and 2. Batteries were Beck and Wood and Schils and Wickholm.

SEWELL BLANKS PHILLIES, 1 TO 0

Pittsburgh, July 20 (AP) — Truett (Rip) Sewell hurled his eighth straight victory for the Pittsburgh Pirates tonight, shutting out Philadelphia 1 to 0 and allowing but five hits before 11,996 fans. The Bucs bunched three of the five hits allotted them by Dick (Kewpie) Barrett in the second inning for the lone score.

The Pirates' rally came during a terrific argument between Umpire George Magerkurth and players on the Pittsburgh bench, which ended in the banishment of Bob Elliott and Max Butcher.

The argument started over a called strike with Elbie Fletcher at bat. Elbie singled and Frankie Gustine sent him to second with another single. After VinceDiMaggio fanned, Al Lopez laced a single to center and Fletcher chalked up the run.

Manager Frankie Frisch had to send Tommy O'Brien, rookie outfielder, to third base to replace Elliott, because of a shortage of infielders due to Shortstop "Hunk" Geary quitting the team.

Rip fanned Schoolboy Rowe, pinchhitting in the ninth, to end the game, after he had put two runners on base by walks.

FRANKS WITH ALL-STARS

Chicago, July 20. (AP)—Julius Franks, University of Michigan guard, today was added to the ranks of the all-stars who will oppose the Washington Redskins, professional champions Aug. 25. The annual charity football game this year will be played at Northwestern's Dyche Stadium instead of Soldier Field. Franks increased the all-star grid roster to 37 men.

Herman of the Brooklyn Dodgers also improved his mark by four points to .332 to stay in second place and Stan Hack of the Chicago Cubs climbed eight points to .330 and third place.

While this trio of hitting stars was moving upward Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren of the Phillies, who led the league for many weeks with an average that was in the .340-.350 neighborhood, continued to slide downward. In the last week his percentage dropped from .323 to .317 and today he was in fourth place.

Based on 200 or more times at bat in games played before today the others in the select society of ten leading hitters were Lonnie Frey, Cincinnati .314; George Kurowski, St. Louis .312; Frank McCormick, Cincinnati .310; Walter Cooper; St. Louis .309; Arky Vaughan, Brooklyn .307; and Augie Galan, Brooklyn .306.

Indicative of the general trend upward was the fact that a week ago the tenth hitter in the senior circuit was Eric Tipton of Cincinnati with a .297 mark. He was crowded out this week by Walker Cooper's surge from a .290 average.

Ernie Lombardi, big catcher of the New York Giants who was last year's batting king, had a .311 average, but had been at bat only 147 times.

Besides leading in percentage, Musial also was tops in total hits with 108, in triples with 12, and was second in runs scored with 55. Vaughan of Brooklyn has scored the most times, 70, has stolen the most bases, 12, and ranked behind Musial in total hits with 107.

Herman has batted in the most runs, 63, one more than Bill Nicholson of Chicago, and also has hit the mostly doubles, 25.

Mel Ott of the Giants was in front of the home run parade with 14 as Nicholson again came in second with 13.

Truett (Rip) Sewell of the Pittsburgh Pirates continued as the league's leading pitcher with 13 victories and two defeats

MUSIAL STEPS UP STICK PACE

New York, July 20 (AP) — Stan Musial, the sophomore slugger of the St. Louis Cardinals, not only continued to set the pace for the National league batters this week but stepped up the beat seven points to a .338 average.

His authoritive hitting was more than sufficient to keep him on top, although the veteran Billy

Two-Year Contract Given Luke Sewell

St. Louis, July 20 (AP) — Officials of the St. Louis Browns are just oozing confidence these days in baseball, their club and its manager, Luke Sewell. That confidence oozed right onto a scroll signing Sewell to a new two-year contract.

The tie that binds (terms were not announced) will keep Luke here through 1945, a period of history which some observers predict may be void of baseball. Such an observation President Don Barnes austerly pooh-poohs.

"Here we are in the middle of a war year and attendance everywhere has held up remarkably well," Barnes asserted today. "The government attitude toward baseball is favorable; the public and the men in the armed services want the game to continue, so I see no reason why it should not go ahead.

"I see only a favorable future, for baseball and for the Browns. I am planning ahead accordingly."

Square-jawed Barnes said steady Sewell would have been signed to a 3-year contract this spring but at that time he conceded baseball was in a precarious position.

"The game just seemed to straighten itself out after the season started." Barnes explained. "And things have looked upward for the game since."

Barnes is mighty happy with Sewell. The quiet former catcher took the helm in early June of 1941 succeeding Fred Haney, and guided the Browns in on a .500 clip. Last year was his first full one and he lifted the club from the mire to a high and dry third.

But he has done something more than that. He's got a castoff crew of hurlers giving opposition all kinds of surprising headaches with steady, heady pitching. He has the Browns scrapping for every run and—

He's brought fire once again to the eyes of the fans. There was a time they were as lethargic as some of the old Brownie players. It was little more than a week ago Sewell and his men had to plead and push a rebellious crowd from the playing field into the stands as an aftermath of an umpiring decision against the club.

These fans, along with Barnes and the entire Browns outfit, believe Sewell is the man to bring the club its first American league pennant.

A Soviet expedition in the Crimea found human bones said to be 40,000 years old.

New York, July 20 (AP)—The lengthy stock market drive ran into fair-sized profit selling opposition today and leaders generally gave up fractions to 2 or more points.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was off .4 of a point at 52.5, duplicating its drop of last Thursday. Of 917 issues traded, 589 were down, 133 up and 195 unchanged. Transfers totalled 990,930 shares compared with 834,120 Monday.

New Haven preferred fell 2½ and the common lost 3-8 when the Interstate Commerce Commission approved modifications in the road's reorganization plan and reiterated that both the senior and junior stocks were without value in the proposed set-up. Central Railway of New Jersey conceded 1 1-8 in the wake of a state court ruling that the legislature's action waiving interest on delinquent carrier taxes was unconstitional. Pullman was trimmed 1¼ points on a statement disclosing a dip in earnings due to taxes and other costs.

Prominent losers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Chrysler, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse, Western Union, Kennecott, Texas Co., Du Pont, Douglas Aircraft and Allied Chemical. American Telephone was up 3-8 at a new top for the move on expectations the regular dividend would be paid. North American retained 1-8 as talk of dissolution plans favorable to shareholders was heard. U. S. Rubber preferred was up 2 at a 1943 high. Eastman Kodak advanced, as did General Electric and International Harvester.

Tampa Electric jumped a point in the curb at one time as directors voted to redeem the 7 per cent series "A" preferred but ended unchanged. In arrears were Cities Service, Creole Petroleum, Pantepec and Phoenix Securities. Turnover here was 259,420 shares versus 257,385 yesterday.

RAILWAY LIENS HIT BY LOSSES

New York, July 20 (AP)—The bond market was tripped for losses of small fractions to around a point today after nearly a week of fairly steady gains.

Rails were in greater supply than other groups and losses were more numerous and wider. Scattered high priced industrials and utilities ignored the lower trend and sold at the best prices in years. Trading was active with sales at $12,164,500 compared with $10,337,700 on Monday. All components of the Associated Press index were lower except the low-yields, which held unchanged.

St. Paul bonds were freely offered after the Interstate Commerce Commission denied a protective committee the right to modify presently drawn up reorganization plans.

Under water at the close were most issues of the Baltimore & Ohio, Katy, Southern Pacific, Seaboard, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific and 'Frisco. National Distillers 3¼s rose to 104¼ and Kings County Lighting 6½s advanced to 108 5-8. U. S. governments were quiet but steady.

Uruguay 3¾s and Mexico 4s advanced in the foreign section.

Frontline Soldiers Win Sympathy Of Navy Boys

BY ERNIE PYLE

Aboard a U. S. Navy Ship Of The Invasion Fleet (by wireless) —(delayed)—In the week that we were aboard ship before we set out on the invasion I naturally was not permitted to send any columns so I spent the days reading and gabbing with the sailors.

Pyle

Every now and then I would run in to take a shower bath like a child playing with a new toy.

I got to know a great many of the sailors personally and almost all of them by nodding acquaintance. I found them to be just people and nice people like the soldiers. They are fundamentally friendly. They all want to get home. They are willing to do everything they can to win the war. They all would kind of like to have their names in the paper and deep down they're all a little afraid.

There is one rather subtle difference between sailors and soldiers I did sense although many of the sailors will probably resent it and that is—the sailors aren't hardened and roughened as much as the soldiers. It's understandable.

Lived Like Animals

The frontline soldier has lived like an animal for months and is a veteran of the cruel fierce world of death. Everything has been abnormal and unstable in his life for months. He has been filthy dirty, has eaten if and when, has slept on the hard ground without cover. His clothes have been greasy, he has lived in a constant haze of dust, pestered by flies and the heat, moving constantly, deprived of all the things that once meant stability. Things such as walls, chairs, floors, windows, faucets, shelves, Coca Colas and the greatly important matter of knowing that you'll go to bed tonight in the same place you got up this morning.

The frontline soldier has had to harden his inside as well as his outside or he would crack under the strain. Sailors aren't sissies—either by tradition or currently—but they aren't as rough and tough as the Tunisian soldiers, at least the gang I was with.

A ship is a home and the security of home has kept them more as they were. They don't cuss as much nor as foully as soldiers. They don't bust loose as riotously when they hit town. They aren't as all-around hard in outlook. They've not drifted as far from normal life as soldiers—for they have world news every morning in mimeographed sheets, have radios, movies nearly every night, ice cream. Their clothes, their beds are clean. They walk through the same doors, up the same steps every day for months. They sleep every night in the same beds.

Of course, when they die, death for them is just as horrible—and sometimes they die in greater masses than soldiers. But until the enemy comes over the horizon a sailor doesn't have to fight. A frontline soldier has to fight everything all the time. It makes a difference in a man's character.

Meek Aboard Ship

Along this line, a very subtle and I'm sure very temporary change came over the soldiers who came aboard for the invasion. They were no longer the rough and tumble warriors I knew on the battlefield. They were quiet, almost meek, aboard ship. From all I can figure they were awed by their little sojourn back into the American way.

There was no quarreling aboard between soldiers and sailors as you might expect. Not even any ridicule or words of traditional contempt for each other. One night I was talking with a bunch of sailors on the fantail and they spoke thoughts you could never imagine coming from sailors' mouths.

One of them said, "Believe me, after seeing these soldiers aboard, my hat's off to the Army, the poor bastards. They really take it and they don't complain about anything. Why it's pitiful to see how grateful they are just to have a hard deck to sleep on."

And another one said, "Any little thing we do for them they appreciate. We've got more than they have and, boy, I'd go three miles out of my way to share something with a soldier."

A third said, "Yes, they live like dogs and they're the ones that have to take those beaches, too. A few of us will get killed but a hell of a lot of them will."

And a fourth said, "Since hearing some of their stories, I've been down on my knees every night thanking God I was smart enough to enlist in the Navy. And they're so decent about everything. They don't even seem to resent all the things we have that they don't."

The sailors were dead serious. It almost brought a lump to your throat to hear them talk.

You folks back home know how I feel about infantry. I'm a rabid one-man movement bent on tracking down and stamping out everybody in the world who doesn't fully appreciate the common frontline soldier. Now that even the sailors are on my side you'd better watch out.

SAWMILLS IN AREA LISTED

Directory Shows Trend To Portable Plants At Lumber Source

To assist lumber buyers, log sellers and timber owners in locating sawmills, the Lake States Forest Experiment Station, located at St. Paul, has compiled a complete list of Michigan sawmills, lath and shingle mills which were in operation last year, as well as mills which commenced operations early in 1943.

The directory listing is based upon the sawmill production of the various mills last year and are listed as large, medium, small, very small and unclassified. The latter are sawmills that did not operate last year.

As an indication of the spread of sawmill operations by the use of portable mills set up right at the source of the lumber, the directory lists an ever growing number of small producers, as well as a corresponding decrease in the number of large sawmills still in operation.

The sawmill plants in Delta county are listed as follows: Bay de Noquet company, Nahma, and I. Stephenson company, Wells, large; Diamond Pole & Piling company, Escanaba, medium; Wm. Brown & Son, Rapid River; Joseph Demeuse, Rock; Diamond Pole & Piling company, Escanaba; Walter Gereau, Perkins; James M. Gifford, Ensign; Leo L. Kivi, Cornell; and Joseph W. Private Cholakis Slightly Mixed Up

Camp Pickett, Va. (AP)—Private first class Mathew Cholakis had to shake his head.

"I sure am a mixed up guy," he said. "Here I am, a Greek in America, a soldier without a gun and a dentist without a patient."

Cholakis came to America from Sparta, Greece, to visit the World's Fair, but before he could use the second part of his round-trip ticket, the Fascists attacked Greece in October, 1940.

So Dr. Cholakis, who practiced dentistry for eight years in Greece, remained in Albany, N. Y., studied English and took out citizenship papers. In December, 1942, he was drafted into the Army.

He works in Camp Pickett's Medical Replacement Training Corps dental clinic. Technicalities of the state dental boards prevent him from receiving a dental license unless he has matriculated at an American dental college for at least one year.

Until he gets his license, he will continue as a laboratory technician. Asked if he was single or had a girl in Amercia, Cholakis tore his eyes from a set of dentures, and then in a slow tone, he said:

"Listen, I told you I was a mixed up guy, but I am not crazy."

In 1944, it is expected that 30,000,000 synthetic rubber passenger car tires will be available for civilian use.

Attend Wedding Via Horse And Wagon

Winchester, Va. (AP)—F. Amos Shryock, father of the bride-to-be, wondered how the reception guests could attend the wedding of his daughter in view of the ruling of the Office of Price Administration that only the minister and bride and groom may ride in automobiles to and from wedding ceremonies.

It wasn't a problem for Shryock long, however. Soon the church was filled with guests for the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Hall Shryock to Edward C. Shokes, Jr.

The guests went home the same way they came to the ceremony—via horse and wagon. Shryock had a large wagon provided with seating arrangements like those of a trolley car. Several trips had to be made.

Sicily Is Good Proving Ground For Air Power

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Allied Command Post, North Africa—(by wireless) — I have met British officers who have not been home for three years. Many Americans I have met over here have been away more than a year. Few have any prospect of getting home before Germany is defeated, perhaps not until Japan is licked.

For the sake of saving lives and finishing the war as soon as possible the best chance lies in pushing air warfare to the fullest extent.

Sicily is showing what the bold use of air power can do. The beach landings there had been dreaded as likely to be the most bloody kind of operation. But because of the heavy use of air power in advance, the landings were relatively easy. Sicily also is demonstrating that enormous quantities of men and supplies can be moved in day after day. Operating the vast amount of shipping necessary for that purpose, with negligible losses. The air cover has made possible all naval and ground operations with few casualties.

Evacuation hospitals made preparations for thousands of casualties but the expected rush of the wounded has not materialized. In the case of Sicily air warfare seems to have further fulfilled the hopes of its champions.

Take Photographs First

It is obvious to the layman that something new has been added to the character of warfare. By taking full advantage of our opportunities in the air we may be able to offset some of the difficulties that otherwise would make the defeat of Japan a long and tedious struggle. It is to be hoped that the possibilities now being demonstrated in Sicily will be exploited fully in our bigger campaigns to come.

Our present air superiority over Sicily is simplifying the whole campaign and speeding it forward in the most hopeful manner. Every day reconnaissance planes bring back photographs showing what traffic is on the roads which is little if any now, what the enemy has on his airfields, where his shipping is, if any.

Sometimes just before a mission goes out they send a plane over to make quick photographs. In the first stages of the invasion of Sicily medium bombers were taking off soon after the photographic plane brought back target pictures. These reconnaissance photographers are a story in themselves. Colonel Elliott Roosevelt heads one air force photographic group in North Africa.

The photographers go out in unarmed planes to get pictures of every town, perhaps mapping pictures, perhaps a closeup shot of a group of buildings, railroad yards or harbor works.

P-38 Most Versatile

We are able to use every kind of plane over Sicily and thus have under the most favorable conditions a laboratory of air warfare such as we have not had elsewhere. We are giving a workout to other planes besides the flying fortress.

The most versatile plane is proving to be the P-38 which once General Arnold was having trouble defending against criticism. This plane has become a remarkable jack- of-all-trades.

Another one in action with spectacular success is the little A-36 light fighter-bomber, created out of the Mustang type. Finally the medium bomber B-26 which was so much criticized in the United States, especially because of its high landing speed, is proving itself fully here. One made a belly landing this week without injury to the crew.

The "Coughlin' Coffin," just retired, several times came all the way home on one engine.

Our various air weapons are proving out here to be highly satisfactory and improvements are coming along steadily. We have remarkable pilots and crews. All of which seems to make air war our natural specialty.

NAMES PICKED FOR FRIGATES

Seven Boats Being Built At Leathem Smith Shipyards

Sturgeon Bay, Wis.—Howard L. Vickery of the United States Maritime Commission at Washington has announced that names have been selected for the seven remaining modern frigates now being built for the commission by the Leathem D. Smith Shipbuilding Company of Sturgeon Bay.

The first ship, launched at the Smith yards on July 10, was christened the U. S. S. Knoxville, being named for the Tennessee city. The second vessel the U. S. S. Chattanooga, also will be named for a Tennessee city. This vessel is now nearing the launching stage on the firm's ways.

The third ship, also under construction will be named the U. S. S. Reading, for Reading Pa. The fourth of the fleet of eight ships will be christened the U. S. S. Peoria, for Peoria, Ill. The U. S. S. Brunswick, the fifth vessel, will be named for the southern city of Brunswick, Georgia.

The state of Iowa is represented in the group, the sixth group being named for the city of Davenport. The last two frigates will be named respectively for Evansville, Ind., and New Bedford, Mass.

Six shipyards on the Great Lakes are building a total of 49 of the frigate type of vessel. Upon completion they will be turned over to the U. S. Navy for patrol work against submarines.

SILVER WINGS WON BY FIVE

Aviation Cadet Board Examines Group At Escanaba

Three young men from Escanaba and two from Wisconsin communities were accepted in the army air corps enlisted reserve Tuesday by the Milwaukee aviation cadet exxamining board in a one-day stopover at Escanaba. Examinations were conducted at the Elks temple by Lieut. Cecil K. Sease and two enlisted men representing the Milwaukee board. Those who passed the tests are:

The air corps enlisted reserve is designed to accomodate young men of 17, not yet 18, and they receive their silver wings lapel buttons after being accepted, but remain on inactive status until they are 18. They are then called for pre-flight training.

The examining board members who visited Escanaba are covering cities in the Upper Peninsula and Wisconsin. Their next stop after Escanaba is Green Bay.

Validity Dates For Red Stamps Fixed

Iron Mountain, Mich. — The OPA today fixed the validity date of four new series of "red" ration stamps in War Ration Book Two, which may be used for purchase of meat, fats, oils and dairy products.

The stamps and dates are as follows.

Red Stamp	Validity Date
T-16 points	July 25
U-16 points	August 1
V-16 points	August 8
W-16 points	August 15

All of the above stamps will expire Aug. 31.

The validation of the stamps on successive Sunday's and the setting of a common expiration date is the same procedure used in the past four months.

At the same time, the OPA reminded housewives that four sets of red stamps "P", "Q", "R" and "S"—expire Saturday, July 31. These stamps should be used well before the expiration date in order to prevent last minutes rushes at retail food stores, OPA pointed out.

Cite Errant Girls As Threat To Servicemen

The threat of the errant girl to the health of servicemen was cited as primary reason for control measures instituted at a meeting of civil and military authorities held yesterday afternoon in the Escanaba city hall.

Purpose of the meeting, called by Escanaba Police Chief Michael Ettenhofer, was to establish a cooperative course of action in handling the increasingly serious veneral disease problem here. Groundwork for such a cooperative program was broken, and another meeting is to be held in about two weeks to further complete the plan.

Attending the meeting yesterday were:

Dr. M. A. Elstein, director, and Mrs. Mary Hansley, of the Delta county health department; Ensign John Stewart, captain of the port, U. S. Coast Guard; Fred Chrisped of naval intelligence; Sheriff Wm. E. Miron; Acting Prosecutor Torval E. Strom; Sgt. Willard Wixsom of the Gladstone detachment, Michigan State Police; Police Chief Torval A. Kallerson of Gladstone, and Police Chief Ettenhofer of Escanaba.

Three-Point Program

Action taken at the meeting resulted in agreement to cooperatively follow this program:

1—Compile a list of names of infected girls and women known to the health department, coast guard authorities, and police. Bring these cases under treatment as soon as possible.

2—Notify proprietors of drinking places that the ages of servicement can be definitely determined by their identification cards, and that sale to minors, either in or out of military service will be prosecuted. It was revealed that association with known infected girls resulted from intoxication. "Get a man intoxicated and even the blackest looks white," one of the officers commented.

3—Civil patrols by police officers to prevent girls loitiering where service men are on duty in defense areas, on street corners and at taverns. Coast guard authorities will cooperate by reporting loitering girls in defense areas.

Six Cases Discovered

Exactly how many girls are now infected in this area was not definitely known. Six cases have been located by health authorities since June 28, which is less than a month ago. Cooperation of the private physician, military and police authorities is necessary to track down such cases, said Dr. Elstein, county health director. Five of the six recently discovered cases are now under treatment. Where a lapse in treatment occurs, the health department should be notified by the physician, the health director explained. All treatments are being given by private physicians.

Some of the cases discovered by police and health authorities sound almost incredible. In one case military authorities at a distant camp asked that a check be made on suspected contacts whose names and Escanaba addresses were given. It was found that four servicemen had been infected by their own wives while home on leave.

But the biggest problem, and the hardest to control, is that of the promiscuous teen-age girl, it was agreed. The coast guard has reported that most of the infection of its men has come from girls 15 and 16 years old. The names of these girls have been turned over to county health authorities.

Sheriff Miron reported that he had received several letters from mothers who complained of their daughters loitering in a certain tavern with service men.

The responsibility of the parents, particularly the mother, was touched on, only to bring statements from officers that often the mother was as great an offender as her daughter. Some of the girls, however, come from good families. Investigators have been told by erring daughters that they come in before their mothers do—and "mother is doing the same thing I am."

Prosecutor Strom told the police and sheriff's officers they had his order to pick up loitering women and girls and jail them whenever they deemed it necessary. The practice of girls loitering on the street and in drinking places late at night will be discouraged.
